The dominant influence on market returns over the past month has been the sharp rise in the value of sterling. The currency appreciated 4.1% against the dollar, 4.7% against the Euro and had a significant 6.5% rise relative to the Japanese Yen. The reason for this were comments made by various members of the Bank of England Monetary Policy Committee following their September meeting all of which pointed to a rise in UK interest rates in November. If it were to happen this would be the first rise for over a decade. Reasons cited were the tolerance for inflation running close to 3% had lessened particularly with the economy running closer to full capacity. Also the risk of a less than favourable departure from the EU remains so taken together all these factors meant the chances of a rate rise had "definitely increased" and was behind sterling's appreciation against other major currencies. Against this background the FTSE All Share Index fell by 0.4% whilst that of the FTSE Equity Investment Instruments Index declined by 1.3% (all figures are total return).

The Net Asset Value of the Growth Portfolio was 0.5% lower. The leading contributor was Syncona which rose by 15% ahead of the listing on NASDAQ of one of their key biotech holdings, called Nightstar. This has resulted in a sharp uplift to Syncona's net asset value.

Key risks

Stock market movements may cause the value of investments and the income from them to fall as well as rise and investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Changes in rates of exchange may have an adverse effect on the value, price or income of investments. If markets fall, gearing can magnify the negative impact on performance.
